I qualified as a nurse in 1987 in Bulgaria and worked in a variety of roles, principally in A&E, intensive care and theatres, before moving to the UK in 2006. Again, I worked in a number of different practice settings, including two years as an Approved Disability Analyst for the Department of Work and Pensions. This role gave me valuable insight into the impact of ill health and injury on people's lives, and the agencies available for support, both inside and outside of statutory services.

I am delighted to have moved into a case management role with Bridge Case Management. It gives me the opportunity to use my nursing knowledge and my understanding of existing support structures for people with injuries and disability, but unlike the DWP role where I met most people just once for assessment, as a case manager I can work with clients throughout their rehabilitation and help them gain successful outcomes.
